What's Your Major?

Continuing Students will remain on their current degree listed in Jenzabar until they complete Core Courses and Lakota Studies requirements. If the degree is no longer offered or they still have CORE listed they need to declare a Major by submitting a Declared Major form listed on the OLC Registrar Web Site.

New Students declare their major on their admission application.

Stop-out students (sat out for one or more semesters) who still have a degree listed that is no longer offered will have to declare a major; this includes those students who still have CORE listed. Need to submit an updated admission application with the Major listed.

Problem: Students are all over the place with their classes but many still don't have the General CORE Courses including Lakota Studies completed. But they were approved to enroll in upper division courses and may have credits in Social Work, Elementary Education, and Math & Science and now have 120 credits to no degree.

**At this time we need to push our students to complete the CORE courses including Lakota Studies. But because our schedule will not allow this 100% of the time we have to do our best to ensure that they are taking CORE.

Directors must ensure that students have completed their CORE before they apply to a degree program which includes a complete application including the writing sample and unofficial transcripts.

Chairs review the application for approval then submit to the Registrar's Office who enters the degree. Chairs will set up a plan of study for the students which will allow them to see the course needs of the students and plan for graduation.
